Welcome Speech by Judge Tilden-Entertainment, &c. This "abelition" or "Gidding's legiment" arrived here about eight o'clock yesterday morning direct from Louisville, Ky. After washing off the smut of travel and the cinders from their eyes, the boys, 350 all told, marched up to the Park, head-8:00 2:45 lb:00 ed by members of the Reception Committee and Leland's Band. The streets 10:00 along which they passed were densely lined with people who expressed their delight at the boys' return in the usual demonstrations. The march to the Square 2.15 PtW was quite an ovation. The regiment swung along in that measured, easy military gait which all the returning troops have, and made as fine an appearance as any regi-ment, equally small, could have made. When all things were in readiness at the Park, Judge Tilden made the fellowing seech of welcome: SOLDIERS OF THE 29TH REGIMEST :- IL WAS coly at a late hour last evening that I was informed of your coming, and requested to express to you the welcome sentiments of the city of Cleveland for the services that you have rendered us. I undertook that task with extreme reluctances. I am not prepared, nor are the people prepared or able to couvey to you the deep feelings of gratitude which they hold toward you commensurate with your services, not only to our children, to this generation, but to many individual throughout the rights.

menurate with your services, and you our children, to this generation, but to mankind throughout the globe.

This is no novelty to us, it is nothing new. We have had regiment after regiment pass through the streets, and yet we feel that the deep sense of obligation which we enterisin falls ahort. Your battles, your marches, your comrades falled in defense of freedom, all contribute to that deep sense of gratitude. We cannot begin to conceive of the character of the services you have rendered the country. While you have stood in the battles' front amount the smoke and dust and roar of artiflery, and all the terrors that characterize scenes like that, we have slept soundly at home. We have enjoyed all its blessings. Every department of industry has been making these sacrifices. Where would we have been had the day not been saved by you at Gettysburg. The cannon's roar would have been heard in the streets of Cleveland. Time and experience alone will show town your works. and experience alone will shable us to ap-preciate the service which flowed from you to the country. You have changed the mapect of the country both at home and abroad. Europe, who regarded us as timid cowards, as a race addicted to money-making, now treats us with the same respect as the most treats us with the same respect as the most powerful State on the globe.

Where now is the satanic power that has consigned 208,000 beings to graves of eternal infamy? Where now are the haughty and defiant leaders of this rebellion, who branded you as cowards and mudsills? Where are they? Some wandering in foreign countries with the brand of Cain upon them; destitute, hungry and shunned by all. They will never dare set their feet on American soil while others rest beneath it, where they shall disturb the country no more.

Where is the great leader, foremost i pride and irso/esce, this of villains as well as chief in authority? Where is he? The strong walls of Fortress Monroe holds him within its confines. Ido not know what will be done with him, nor will I venture to predict his fate, but all I will say is that after the execution of that arch traitress. Mrs. Surratt, his crinoline and petticoats will not save him.

He forgot, however, in his excitement that the ladder was about forty feet long and too big to get into the cistern. The benevolent hearted babyboy Louis sat down on the step, the very picture of distress at the idea that his little playthings, the kittens, were in such trouble. The rest of the family, both old and young, were equally distressed about the little pets, whose plaintive mewings could be distinctly heard, and they were in a peck of trouble as to how to get them out-At first they too't the garden-rake and let it down to the bottom, hoping the kittens would have gumption enough to get on to the teeth and thus allow themselves to be hauled up. But the kittens would not see it in that light. The mistress then hit upon the very brilliant plan of letting a basket she became frightened, and obeyed the first law of nature, self-preservation, as she thought, by jumping out of the baskets much to the disappointment of the kindhearted mistress and the rest of the family. What was to be done now? Necessity is the mother of invention. The eldest daughter of the mistress suggested that a rope be tied around the body of Mary, the chambermaid, and that they let her down into the cistern to secure the kittens, and then haul her up. No sooner proposed than adopted. Accordingly Mary had the rope tied around her, and all the older hands, consisting of the mistress, the kitchen girl, and the daughter, united in letting her down. She secured two of the kittens alive, the third one being drowned. She
